

Al Bustan hosts business elite tomorrow

MUSCAT — Oman's top corporate and business community will assemble at Al Bustan Palace InterContinental Hotel Muscat tomorrow for the latest Oman Business Forum lunch.

Expected to attract over 150 business guests, the Oman Business Forum lunch will host guest speaker, Michael Caines, project director of Muscat Golf Course Project (MGCP), who is expected to talk further about the Sultanate's most unique urban living and leisure project to date.

Taking place in the hotel's Gulf of Oman function room, OBF is a networking forum, held every two months at Al Bustan Palace Hotel. Each lunch features a high-profile guest of honour who addresses attendees with a short presentation on current topical business matters in the Sultanate.

It also features Gulf Air, V-Kool Oman and Oman Resources Development Consultants (ORDC), as event partners for the coming forum. Its business partners for 2005 — Ociped, MHD, OUA and PRD nationwide — will also be present. The forum is targeted at all businesses in Oman, and offers new companies the opportunity to introduce themselves and build their corporate image and brand within the community.

As the key sponsor and organiser of the event, Will Blake, assistant director of sales at Al Bustan Palace Hotel, said: "The forum allows like-minded business members of all nationalities to network, exchange insights into the market and often provide opportunities for mutual business relationships. We like to make sure that our lunches are a welcome break from the stress of the office, allowing members to mix with other businesses while listening to a short presentation from a variety of high-profile guest speakers."

This is the fifth Oman Business Forum lunch to be held since the forum was first launched at the end of last year.

"We hope that the forum will continue to grow and that companies will continue to find our lunches beneficial and informative, helping them gain insight into Oman's fast changing commercial arena," adds Blake.
